Help Yourself To Read, Write, and Spell, W. G. Loesel. Educational Development Corporation, Ginn and Co., 205 West Wacker Drive, Chicago 5; 1965. Paperbound. Illustrated. 165 pages.

This book is designed to help the remedial reader and the foreign-born, especially the student who has advanced past grade four without having mastered reading and writing. Words are pictured which are used and needed in everyday conversation in school, at home, and at work. Simple directions, easy-to-hard vocabulary progression, and repeating work successfully with the guidance of a classroom teacher. A second book offers more advanced work in areas of knowledge about everyday life and dealing with other people. The added vocabulary will enable the student to write a business letter, apply for a job, and read and understand current events in a daily newspaper.

Topsy Turvy, Sidney Offit. St. Martin's Press, Inc., 175 Fifth Avenue, New York 10; 1965. Clothbound. 169 pages. Price, $3.50.

A boy and his sister are introduced to Deadeye Cromwell, a young boy who rides a motorcycle, wears a derby hat, and smokes a cigar, and to the strange world of Topsy Turvy, a town where the roles of children and adults are reversed. Under the leadership of Brainchild Plotkind, mothers and fathers have long ago been given up (although each household has its adults to take care of). The children dine on jelly beans and ice cream, wear fancy costumes, and stay up as late as they like. But bands of discontented teen-agers threaten the stability of Brainchild's regime, and often at night the children can be heard sobbing in their sleep. The two visitors decide to try to save Topsy Turvy and their efforts illustrate the meaning of childhood and growing up, and the universal need for love.

Read-Study-Think Series. American Education Publications, Inc., 55 High Street, Middletown, Conn.; 1965. Paperbound. Illustrated. 31 pages each. Price, 20 cents each.

Each page of each book in this series is a complete work unit, leading the student to ask himself three questions: What did it say? What did it mean by saying it? What can I do with this information? The three levels of meaning are built into every exercise. Based on the weekly reader format, the program is graded and sequential for grades one through six. The skills-development stressed in the readers includes deriving meaning from figurative language, making inferences, drawing conclusions, seeing cause and effect, distinguishing between the relevant and irrelevant and between fact and opinion, seeing relationships and analogies, applying new information to various situations and using it as a base for further conjecture.

Miscellaneous

The First Big Step. National School Public Relations Association, 1201 16th Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20036; 1966. Paperbound. Illustrated. 34 pages. Price, 60 cents.

Addressed to parents of disadvantaged children who are about to enter school for the first time, this booklet is intended for use by teachers and other adults in programs to acquaint parents of three-to-five-year-olds with what they can do to make their child's step into school a smooth one. The parent is encouraged to answer his child's questions and ask him questions as well; tell him why the floor gets swept; take him to the railroad station or the airport; and teach him how to hear, taste, smell, and touch.
